My.GUIDE Academic Stress Worksheet

Topic: Academic stress and study planning

When a student feels overwhelmed by academic deadlines, review the workload with the counselor and identify one manageable task to complete today.

Write down three upcoming assignments and their deadlines. Choose one small study goal for each assignment and schedule a realistic ten minute study block.

Practice slow breathing before starting a task. Reflect on the thoughts that increase worry and write a balanced alternative thought with your counselor.

What task will you begin today? What support can you ask for this week?

Rate your stress from zero to ten before and after trying the study plan.

Review progress at the next counseling session and adjust the goals together.

This student worksheet supports structured problem solving and reflection.
